Keating, Others Address Diversity in Construction

Philadelphia (June 2008) -- Pierce Keating, CEO of Daniel J. Keating Company, will give testimony tomorrow, June 25th, at a public hearing before the Mayor and the Commission on Construction Industry Diversity, Room 400, City Hall, 6:15 PM. Keating, one of the Philadelphia contractors building Phase 1 of the Convention Center Annex, is known for employing gender and racially diverse construction teams on public and private projects. The purpose of the hearing is to identify "Challenges and Barriers to Minority and Female Representation in the Building Trades Unions from Four Perspectives: Owner, Contractor, Trades People and Unions."

Established in 1911, the Daniel J. Keating Company is a third generation general contractor and construction management firm. One of the most recognized names in the greater Philadelphia construction industry, some of our recent projects include the renovation of Philadelphia City Hall, Suburban Station Transit Center renovation, the new Liberty Bell Center, and several major expansion projects at Philadelphia International Airport.
